CONSUMPTION,
IN its first stages, can be successfully checked by the prompt use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Even in the later periods of that disease, the cough is wonderfully relieved by this medicine.
"I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral with the best effect in my practice. This wonderful preparation once saved my life. I had a constant cough, night sweats, was greatly reduced in flesh, and given up by my physician. One bottle and a half of the Pectoral cured me."—A. J. Eidson, M. D., Middleton, Tennessee.
"Several years ago I was severely ill. The doctors said I was in consumption, and that they could do nothing for me, but advised me, as a last resort, to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. After taking this medicine two or three months I was cured, and my health remains good to the present day."—James Birchard, Darien, Conn.
"Several years ago, on a passage home from California, by water, I contracted so severe a cold that for some days I was confined to my state-room, and a physician on board considered my life in danger. Happening to have a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, I used it freely, and my lungs were soon restored to a healthy condition. Since then I have invariably recommended this preparation."—J. B. President Harrison's Vetoes Based on Selfish Grounds.

President Harrison has vetoed two bills, which is no small portion of the number that have been presented for his approval. If he continues at the same rate he may yet beat Cleveland's record and will certainly rank a good second among all the Presidents in the matter of vetoes. The character of the two bills he has vetoed points to the inference that President Harrison's vetoes will be inflicted upon people who can do him the least harm, and that he will allow liberal expenditures to be made where they will do the most good, to himself.

The bill which the President vetoed last week was one authorizing the city of Ogden, in Utah Territory, to increase its debt. Utah as a territory is no factor in a Presidential election, and as she is liable to be kept outside the sisterhood of States for years to come President Harrison, notwithstanding his aspirations for renomination, can deny the request of the city of Ogden and of the whole Territory of Utah with impunity.

The bill vetoed on Tuesday was a bill appropriating $200,000 to enlarge the new public building at Dallas, Tex. The Lone Star State is one which President Harrison can afford to ignore anyhow, because in his aspiration for a second Presidental term he has no hope of any help from that quarter. Besides, bills for public buildings belong to a class which can be vetoed by a Presidential candidate without much fear of the veto counting against him, either at the National nominating Convention or at the polls.

It is only the Congressman representing the district, who is punished by his constituents for the defeat of a public building bill, and the Congressman has a poor chance of getting even with the President. In the closing sentence of his veto of the Dallas bill. Mr. Harrison comes very near saying that the erection of public buildings is a local issue. He actually says: "The erection of public buildings is largely a matter of local necessity and convenience," and, of course, these considerations are not to weigh against pensions, coast defenses, and subsidies for steamship companies, the three things which he says in his message are of universal necessity. A Republican President who is a Zealous candidate for a second term can afford to disappoint a community in a Territory that does not enjoy the franchise or in a state that is hopelessly Democratic, especially when by doing so he can the easily promote legislation granting subsidies to shipping monopolies in New York, where the friendship of monopolies has heretofore done so much to help the Republican party.

African Slaves.

THE SIGHTS THAT ARE WITNESSED IN THE SLAVERS' PEN.

All ages, of both sex, are to be seen: mothers with their babes, young men and women, boys and girls, and even babies who cannot yet walk, and whose mothers have died of starvation, or perhaps been killed by the Lufembe. One seldom sees either old men or old women. They are all killed in the raids. Their marketable value being very small, no trouble is taken with them.

Witnessing groups of these poor, helpless wretches, with their emaciated forms and sunken eyes, their faces a very picture of sadness, it is not difficult to perceive the intense grief that they are inwardly suffering, but they know too well it is of no use to appeal for sympathy to their merciless masters, who have been accustomed from childhood to witness acts of cruelty and brutality, so that to satisfy their insatiable greed they will commit themselves, or permit to be committed, any atrocity, however great. Even the pitiable sight of one of these slave sheds does not half represent the misery caused by this traffic — homes broken up, mothers separated from their babies, husbands from wives, and brothers from sisters. When last at Masankusu I saw a slave woman who had with her one child, whose starved little body she was clutching to her breast. I was attracted by her sad face, which betokened great suffering. I asked her the cause of it, and she told me in a low sobbing voice the following tale:

"I was living with my husband and three children in an inland village a few miles from here. My husband was a hunter. Ten days ago the Lufembe attacked our settlement; my husband defended himself, but was overpowered and speared to death with several of the other villagers. I was brought here with my three children, two of whom have already been purchased by the traders. I shall never see them any more. Perhaps they will kill them on the death of some chief, or perhaps kill them for food. My remaining child you see, is ill, dying from starvation; they give us nothing to eat. I expect even this one will be taken from me to-day, as the chief, fearing lest it should die and become a total loss, has offered it for a very small price. As for myself," said she, "they will sell me to one of the neighboring tribes to toil in the plantations, and when I become old and unfit for work I shall be killed."

There were certainly five hundred slaves exposed for sale in this one village alone. Large canoes were constantly arriving from known river with merchandise of all kinds with which they purchased these slaves. A large trade is carried on between the Ubangi and Lulungu rivers. The people inhabiting the mouth of the Ubangi buy the Balolo slaves at Masankusu and the other markets. They then take them up the Ubangi river and exchange them with the natives there for ivory. These natives buy their slaves solely for food. Having purchased slaves they feed them on ripe bananas, fish and oil, and when they get them into good condition they kill them. Hundreds of the Balolo slaves are taken into the river and disposed of in this way each month. A great many other slaves are sold to the large villages on the Congo to supply victims for the execution ceremonies.

Much life is lost in the capturing of slaves and during their captivity many succumb to starvation. Of the remainder numbers are sold to become victims to cannibalism and human sacrifice ceremonies. There are few indeed who are allowed to live and prosper.

What the Best Judges Declare an Invention to Be.

The late Judge Hall, of the United States Circuit Court, says:

"An invention, in the sense of the patent law, means the finding out, the contriving, the creating of something which did not exist and was not known before, and which can be made useful and advantageous in the pursuits of life, or which can add to the enjoyment of mankind.

"In other words, the thing patented must be new; and it must be useful to an appreciable extent, though the measure of that usefulness is not material. Any degree of utility appreciable by a jury is sufficient, upon the question of utility, to sustains patent." (Conover vs. Roach, vol. iv. Fisher's Patent Cases, p. 16.)

And Judge Sawyer, late of the Supreme Court of the United States, defines invention in the following language:

"Invention is the work of the brain, and not of the hand. If the conception is practically complete, the artisan who gives it reflex and embodiment in a machine is no more the inventor than the tools with which he works. Both are instruments in the hands of him who sets them in motion and prescribes the work to be done. Mere mechanical skill can never rise to the sphere of invention. The latter involves higher thought, and brings into activity a higher faculty. Their domains are distinct. The line which separates them is sometimes difficult to trace; nevertheless, in the eye of the law, it always subsists. The mechanic may greatly aid the inventor, but cannot usurp his place." (Blandy vs. Griffith, vol. iii. Fisher's Patent Cases, p. 616.)

But while, as Judge Sawyer asserts, the boundary line between the domain of invention and mere mechanical skill is strictly drawn, yet some of the most valuable inventions have been so simple as to lead one to think that they were obvious, and did not rise to the dignity of invention.

Concerning the simplicity of invention, the late Judge Story, of the Supreme Court of the United States, remarks:

"The simplicity of an invention, so far as being an objection to it, may constitute its great excellence and value.

"Indeed, to produce a great result by very simple means, before unknown or unthought of, is not unfrequently the peculiar characteristic of the very highest class of minds." (Ryan vs. Goodwin, vol. i. Robb's Patent Cases, p. 729.)

It not unfrequently happens that a sudden lucky thought gives a man a small (sometimes a large) fortune—the outgrowth of an important invention.

More than a quarter of a century ago, the late Judge Shipman of the United States Circuit Court of New York embodied the idea in one of his decisions:

"A subject matter to be patentable must require invention, but it is not necessarily the result of long and painful study, or embodied alone in complex mechanism. A single flash of thought may reveal to the mind of the inventor the new idea, and a frail and simple contrivance may embody it. Some inventions are the result of long and weary years of study and labor, pursued in the face of abortive experiments, baffled attempts, and finally reached after the severest struggles; while others are the fruit of a single happy thought." (Magic Ruffle Company vs. Douglas, vol. ii. Fisher's Patent Cases, p. 338.)

Other opinions similiar in purport, might be added; but these are sufficient to dfine what constitutes a patentable invention, which is important information for every inventor to know.

The Census.

By August 1st, if all goes well, we shall know once more how many people the United States contains at present. The enumeration commences June 1, or rather June 2, the first day of the month being Sunday.

So well are the plans arranged that it is thought the work will be finished in two weeks in the large cities. Among the straggling country population it will take longer. It is said to be a fact that in some parts of the country are persons so ignorant that they do not know the ages of their own children. Others will insist on giving also the names of their children who are dead.

For census purposes the country is divided into 175 districts, with a supervisor for each. The President appoints the supervisors of these districts, and the supervisors appoint the enumerators who do the field work. It is expected that all the enumeration will be ended by July 1.

In the list of questions are some that constitute the new feature in census taking in metaphysical science. The enumarated person must tell whether he is married, single or divorced, which might be called neither married nor single. So if we tell the truth, it will be known just how many legally disjointed persons there are in the United States, the home of divorce.

You must also tell whether you have any acute or chronic disease, and how long you have had it. You must like wise inform the census man whether you are an idiot, weather you are deformed, crippled, crazy, or maimed. If you are a tramp or pauper that too must go down upon the pitiless page of the enumerator, and you must confess if your a prisioner, homeless child or a convict. You are obliged to mention whether you own or rent the house you live in. An electrical counting and tabulating machine has been invented since the last census was taken, which does in 5 hours labor that formerly required 55. It will be brought into lively requistion this summer.

The amount of mortgaged property in the country is expected to be ascertained. Finally, the only way to escape telling how old you are is to die before the census taker comes. A heavy fine is imposed for refusing to answer questions or for answering them untruthfully.

Foreman—What is all that racket over there; somebody pied a form?

Printer—No, sir. The towel fell on the floor thats all.

A sailor is considered a good skipper when he understands the ropes. The same may be said of a little girl.

Bankrupting the Treasury.

The service pension bill and other raids upon treasury meditated by the republican leaders in congress will not only wipe out the surplus but put the annual expenditures of the government many millions of dollars above the sum total of the revenues. There is method in the madness of these "cut-purses of the realm." What they are doing is done with the most deliberate purpose. They mean to eliminate the issue of tariff reform as a factor in the political problem. If they can squander the surplus and bankrupt the treasury they will cry out that the tariff cannot be reduced without cutting the revenue away down below the needs of the government. The scheme is worthy of the desperate and reckless men who have devised it.

Neither the existing tariff, nor the McKinley bill which it is proposed shall take its place, is a measure intended pimarily to raise revenue. The object of the present tariff law is to prevent importations. Hence it necessarily reduces the revenue although it piles heavy taxes upon the consumer by enhancing the cost of pretty much every thing he buys. The McKinley bill is calculated simply and solely to intensify this policy. Therefore it is plain that the republican schemers are overshooting the mark. When they shall have gotten rid of the surplus and shut out revenue-producing imports to an extent that will make it impossible for the government to meet its obligations, the necessity for a reduction of the tariff to a revenue basis will become more apparent. When the treasury shall be empty, prohibitory taxes will have to give way to revenue duties. Thus will the tariff restrictionists be "hoist by their own petard."

Congressman Willson of West Virginia remarked very wittily the other day that the McKinley bill is merely a scheme of the republican politicians to pay off their debts of the last presidental canvass and to raise money to carry on the next. There was as much truth as wit in the remark. But it would be quite as true to have said that the money for the next republican presidental campaign is, at least in part, to come out of the treasury surplus voted in subsidies to steamships and disbursed in similar appropriations Even the reckless pension largess is intended as a payment of election expenses. It will be only when the treasury shall be emty that the mass of the people will come in for their innings. But they will get them, never fear.—Patriot.

A Service Pension.

In his speech in advocacy of the Service Pension bill, which passed the House on Wednesday last, Representative Grosvenor, of Ohio, speaking for the measure, assured the House that "this bill, when to it is superadded the Prisoner of War bill, which will be passed at once, will add to the pension rolls of the Government the names of 450,000 persons, and will extend that roll to 950,000 pensioners. It will produce an annual expenditure of $150,000,000, or nearly 45 per cent. of the gross revenue of the Government, an exhibition of munificent generosity upon the part of this Government such as has never been equaled by all of the civilized nations of the world put together."

This is certainly a magnificent showing, but is it a just and proper use of the public money? It is right that the maimed and feeble veteran of the war should be cared for by a grateful people. It is right that his widow and orphans and his dependent parents, where he has any, should be provided for from the public purse. The country recognizes this debt, and every pension bill which is limited to this class of claims is cordially approved or at least cheerfully acquiesced in by the people.

But why should able bodied men of means and position be authorized to draw $8 a month from the public treasury because some time between 1861 and 1865 they served ninety days in the army or navy of the United States and are now 60 years old? A considerable number of those whose $96 a year will go to swell the annual pension charge are now drawing $5000 a year as members of Congress. Others are in good positions and comfortable circumstances elsewhere and some are men of large wealth, but all alike who served a scant three months in the Union army and are three score years of age are made by this bill public pensioners.

A service pension is proper enough after such a lapse of time as to raise a presumption of febleness in all the survivors of the war, and the small number of such survivors makes an inquiry to determine which are necessitous and which not hardly worth the trouble. There are now 149,531 survivors of the war 62 years of age and over. Of these 63,427 are already drawing pensions for wounds and disabilities. The House pension bill as reported proposed to put the other 80,493 on the pension roll who at present, being in good health and condition, have no claim on the Government's bounty. This would have added $7,727,328 to the pension charge of this year and would have increased largely every year until 1907, according to the table submitted by Commissioner Raum The House, by changing the age fixed upon by the committee for pensions to begin from 62 to 60, made all the estimates submitted much under the mark. The service pension is but one feature of a comprehensive pension bill whose full effects in depleting the Treasury may be gathered from Mr. Grosvenor's frank statement given above.

There are men totally disabled by reason of wounds received in the war who are petitioning for a small increase in their pension. Their claims are highly meritorious, but the prospect of their being recognized is lessened by this voluntary donation of $96 a year to thousands of men who do not need it in the least. The house has made a mistake in inaugurating this service pension business. It is sure to create a popular reaction on the subject of pensions to the prejudice of veterans whose claims on the country are legitimate and whose necessities are real. The Senate voted down a service pension once this season. It will do the soldiers a real service by rejecting this House amendment to the dependent pension bill.—Press.

THE SUSPICIONS STRENGTHENED.

IN THE HIRAM CROUSE CASE AT LAIRDSVILLE.

CIRCUMSTANCES STRENGTHEN THE BELIEF THAT HE WAS MURDERED AND THE STORE BURNED TO COVER THE CRIME—WHAT THE "LUMINARY," OF MUNCY, SAYS ABOUT IT.

The Muncy Luminary speaks in its issue of May 1 as follows:

Was Hiram crouse robbed and murdered and his building then set on fire to destroy the evidence of crime, is the question that is agitating the people of Lairdsville and vicinity. It is safe to say that nine-tenths of all the people familiar with the circumstances believe the question can only receive an affirmative answer. While this belief is almost universal, very little, if any evidence has been discovered to support the belief, but the position of the body when found and the location of the fire when first discovered are at least suspicious. The cellar under the store room extended about four feet into the street beyond the store front, and was covered by a porch, with steps to enter the store door; the room over the store, in which Mr. Crouse slept, extended as far front as the cellar below, and over the porch. Mr. Crouse's bed stood with the head to the north, and at least fifteen feet from the front of the room. After the fire the buckles of his trousers, his knife, and a small amount of money was found in the cellar, among the irons of his bedstead. This it would seem satisfactorily proves that Mr. Crouse had been in bed. His body was found face down against the front wall of the building, his head about three feet up the wall and his back bent to the front by the weight of the timbers that had fallen upon him. Those who advocate that Mr. Crouse was dead when placed in that position, think that had he fallen from the front of the room up stairs, he would have been in plain sight and would have fallen on the porch, as that part of the building was the last to burn. Again the fire broke out in the rear of the building, in the ware room, and his friends think he would have been able to make his way to the window in the front of the room and that had he been in that room when Joseph Smith entered it from the window, he must have been seen. And then, the walls were pushed in to protect other property, and it would certainly seem that such being the case the body would have been found nearer the centre of the cellar. Mrs. William Ritter, who resides next door, was up at 1 o'clock, and she distinctly heard a noise, twice repeated, that she now feels certain came from Mr. Crouse's store. She was somewhat startled, but concluding that the noise was made by horses, in some stable near by, retired, without awakening her husband, and in less than one hour the store was discovered to be on fire. All these circumstances led the people to believe that robbery and murder most foul was first committed; that Mr Crouse was killed up stairs, his body carried or dragged down cellar, placed where it was found, covered with the emty boxes and barrels that was in that part of the cellar, to make the distruction of the body certain. As it was the remains were so disfigured that no absolutely certain identification could be made. The friends of the deceased are very anxiously looking for evidence and will do all that lies in their power to arrive at the truth.

What a Somerset (Pa.) County Man thinks of the Invalids Hotel and Surgical Institute, located at Buffalo N. Y.

W. H. Miller of Stoyestown, Pa., who has been suffering for nearly a quarter of a century from an affection of the kidneys, resulting in the necessity of a surgical operation, after consulting and being treated by a number of our own doctors, as well as receiving the treatment and advice of some of the most eminent professional men of the land, finally became acquainted with the above Institute, and their mode and means of treatment. After due correspondence with the World's Dispensary Medical Association, the proprietors of the Invalids' Hotel, he was induced to visit said institution. On arriving there and after being fully acquainted, he lost no time in making the necessary arrangements for the required treatment. After remaining for nearly four weeks at the Invalid's Hotel, where you receive the kindest and best treatment, and where patients are loth to leave, after recovery, he returned to his family and friends a cured and happy man.

In giving this to the public, Mr. Miller wishes to say that he owes the aforesaid Institute nothing but his best wishes. And the fact that his own success and great relief is due to similiar testimonials from others who were successfully treated there for all manner of chronic diseases from every State and Territory of the Union, Canada, Mexico, and South America. It it a marvel of success. He further says, should this fall to the notice of any sufferers from chronic diseases, such as seem to baffle the skill of your own physician—but first and above all give your own physicians a fair and impartial trial, and all the available means offered, as Somerset county may justly feel proud of her medical men, who spare no means nor time in the treatment of all cases entrusted to their charge. And if they fail, in many cases, it will be an act of charity to point you to a place where a probable cure may be effected, which is the humble intent of the above communication. The above Association is courteous, prompt and reliable.—Somerset (Pa.) Herald.

Ex Solicitor General George A. Jenks says of the charges against Quay: "I think the charges made by the press of the country are becoming so serious that unless he disproves them they will be adverse to the Republican party. The other day I listened to the conversation of three crowds of Republicans on a train who were talking about it. They didn't know me, but they one and all said that Quay must now come to the front and defend himself or else the success of the party could only be obtained by dumping him. It is one thing or the other, and there is no other alternative. This is not a case where silence will prevail."

Spots on the Sun.

It began to rain again soon after dinner, and a disgusted citizen of Detroit, who came down on a woodward Avenue tramcar beside an old man, remarked:

"I presume this is owing to those spots on the sun."

"Hey?" called the other, as he put his hand to his ear.

"Spots on the sun!" yelled the other.

"Hey? Spots? Where are the spots?"

"On the sun!"

The old man rose up, crossed the car, looked out of the window, squared around for a minute, and then returned and said:

"Can't see the sun 't all. How did the spots come there?'

"I don't know."

"Hey?"

"I don't know."

"Have you seen 'em?"

"No."

"Oh, you haven't? What was your object in telling me there were spots on the sun? I am not so old that I permit any one to make a fool of me."

"The other now looked out of a window and assumed a careless air, but the old man was after him with.

"You come into a car when I am minding my own bussiness and begin to talk about spots on the sun. Who are you, sir? Did you want to get me up to pick my pocket?"

"They say the rainy weather comes from the spots on the sun," explained the other.

"Who says so? Name the man! I'm around all the time, and I haven't heard of any spots on the sun!"

The citizen got up to change his seat; but the old man pulling him down said:

"You want to work some sort of a game on me and I know it. If I ever catch you within a rod of me again, I'll—"

The citizen made a break and got out; and, though he had no umbrella, he stepped off the tram-car in the midst of the rain, with the look of a man glad to make the exchange. He had jut reached the curb when the old man came to the platform and called out:

"Took me for a greenhorn, did you! I wish I'd walked you right to the police-station, you miserable swindler! Spots on the sun, indeed!

Humbugs.

P. T. Barnum is claimed as the father of the saying that the American public love to be humbugged. We don't believe this of the famous showman, nor do we believe in the truth of the idea expressed. The American people do not relish a humbug any more than the people of any other country, yet when they once do get bit, they neither make a very vigorous kick, nor give up trying the same scheme over again when it comes along again perhaps in a new dress. Humbugs thrive and wax wealthy in these free and glorious United States of America, because a large part of our population are so gullible or curious or so afflicted by capidity that they take chances in every plausible scheme advertised in the newspapers in hope of "getting something for nothing."

It is useless to waste space to print advice, warning the credulous and unwary of these perennial schemes—offering so much and yielding so little, for no matter how many times a swindle may be exposed a new crop of fools is ready to bite and send along their stamps and money whenever a new scheme is presented. Strange to say, in many cases the same people have been known to send over and over again, year in and year out, getting little or nothing in return. It is impossible to teach a set of people who will not learn, and it is a waste of argument to expatiate upon the evils referred to in the hope that it may benefit a few.

There have been innumerable instances where an exposition of a swindle in a public newspaper actually caused money to be sent to the swindlers exposed!—Agent's Guide.

The World's Costliest Gems.

The largest perfect diamond in the world is now the Imperial, that was exhibited at the Paris Exposition last year, and which is valued at one million of dollars, says The Ladies Home Journal This is the most valuable stone in the world, and is owned by a syndicate. The biggest and best ruby in existence is owned in London, and is valued at $50,000. It has no parallel, even in the Crown Jewels, and it is related that the Duchess of Edinburg carried it all the way to St. Petersburg for the Czar to have a look at it. FRIDAY, MAY 9, 1890.

CANDIDATES.

The following is a list of candidates for County offices to be voted for at the delegate election held Saturday August 9, 1890, between the hours of 2 and 7 o'clock p. m. Nominating convention Tuesday August 19th.

FOR PROTHONOTARY & CLERK OF THE COURTS.
J. H. MAIZE,
of Bloomsburg, Pa.

G. M. QUICK,
of Bloomsburg, Pa.

FOR COUNTY TREASURER,
JOHN L. KLINE,
of Conyngham.

JOHN MOUREY,
of Roaringcreek Township.

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONER
STEPHEN PETTIT
of Scott Township.

B. FRANK EDGAR,
of Fishingcreek.

DANIEL YOCUM,
of Hemlock Township.

FOR REGISTER AND RECORDER,
CHARLES H. CAMPBELL, of Bloomsburg.

FOR REPRESENTATIVE,
E. M. TEWKSBURY,
of Catawissa.

FOR ASSOCIATE JUDGE,
MORDECAI MILLARD,
of Centre.

The Democrats of Rhode Island, having a majority in the Legislature, will elect governor, lieutenant-governor, attorney-general, secretary of State and treasurer. Under the ballot reform act, with a reform Democratic administration to secure a fair election, it is likely to be a long time before the Republicans again get control of the State of Rhode Island and the Providence Plantations.

Jerseytown went home in great glee on Tuesday, for her favorite son, W. C. Johnston, secured the County Superintendency. Mr. Johnston is a graduate of the Normal School and possesses the ability to make a competent official, and will undoubtedly do so. Whether or not the three term rule has prevailed heretofore, it is now fully established as a precedent, for that was one of the strongest factors that operated against Mr. Grimes, and brought about his defeat. Another element of Mr. Johnston's strength lay in the concentration of his forces, and the assistance rendered him by prominent politicians. The fight was a warm one for two weeks previous to the convention, and we are glad to record the fact that through it all no unkind words were spoken by either of the candidates against the other. Mr. Grimes fought well, but within a week the tide turned against him, and he had to succumb. He can retire from the office with a consciousness of having performed his duties faithfully, and that his rejection for a fourth term was not on account of any personal reasons.

Property Valuation.

MESSRS EDITORS.

I notice in your paper some agitation of the tax question, and I thought perhaps you might not object to my giving a bit of my experience in that direction.

People who read Mr. J. C. Wenner's article in your paper, giving certain comparisons of valuation between Benton and Fishingcreek Townships, may come to the conclusion, that we of Fishingcreek are rather highly favored. As a township this may be the case. I do not intend to enter into any controversy with him on that score. I have neither the time nor the disposition to go over the ground, to see whether his conclusions are correct.

But I shall cite a few individual cases to show that we are not all so highly favored.

I own two properties in Fishingcreek Township, one of which is valued for tax purposes six hundred dollars above what I paid for it, the other nearly two hunbred dollars more. There is another farm near by that is valued far above its cost price. Two more that are up to their cost price.

If Benton can beat that we are ready to hear from them.

But it is not to beat Benton, that I am writing. I presume that Wenner's statements are correct. From my knowledge or acquaintance with the man, I feel safe in concluding, that he knows where of he speaks, and the only evidence that I can see of crankiness about him or his work, is his presuming to criticise the doings of men in official position. At the risk of being called a crank I shall do the same thing. I shall confine myself to the unequal distribution of our taxes by the unfair valuation of real estate.

I have already mentioned some farms as being valued up to and some above their selling value; if all were thus valued for tax purposes, there would be no just cause for complaint. But such is not the case. There are farms in our township, that are rated but little over one half their selling value. And the same is true in regard to farms in adjoining townships. I have been informed by good authority, that there are properties in the town of Bloomsburg, rated for tax purposes at less than half of their selling value. My informant mentioned a property that he owned, or of which he had control; that was rated at four thousand dollars, and that he had refused ten thousand dollars for it, and would do the same again. He also stated, that this was not an isolated case. Now these things ought not to be. There should be some way of securing a more equal valuation of properties for tax purposes. I have been told by the Commissioners when I have asked for a reduction of my rates, that the valustion had been made by men under oath, and they had noright to change it. Perhaps they thought this was the case, when it came to reducing valuations, I have however been told, that they have at times made sweeping changes, where they supposed property was rated too low.

Now I suggest that if they have no right to level down, that they level up by making the valuation of all property not only up to but above its selling value, as is now the case with some. And let this rule be applied not only to farm property, but to property in towns as well. There is no doubt but the farmer is the highest taxed person in the community. The luxury of money at interest is something the average farmer knows nothing about; so all that he posesses is in open view, and of course does not escape the assessor's vision.

His farm may be mortgaged for half its value, no matter, he will be taxed the same as if he had it clear. The person holding the mortgage will of course be taxed for that. This may be just, but plain people fail to see the justice of it. But that matter is not within the control of the assessors or commissioners.

But a little effort on their part might secure a more equal valuation of real estate. It is not fair, that some persons lands should be rated higher for tax purposes, than the same lands would bring on the market, whilst some are rated at less than half in some cases, and but little more than half in many others,

There are some other matters in regard to our system of taxation to which I shall perhaps call the attention of tax payers at no distant day.

JAMES I. CAMPBELL.

WAR ON DELAMATER.

FORTY THOUSAND GRANGERS ARRAYED AGAINST HIM.

Senator Delamater cannot hope to get the support of members of the Grangers' organization of Pennsylvania if mentioned for governor," said Worthy Master Leonard Rhone, the head of the Grangers' organization in this State, in Philadelphia. Mr. Rhone is a resident of Center County, an ex-member of the House of Representatives and now a member of the State Revenue Commission. Worthy Master Rhone, as the head of the State Grange, speaks for an organization that numbers 40,000 votes within its ranks in the Commonwealth.

"Several weeks ago," said Mr. Rhone "I sent out inquiries among the representative men in our organization as to whom their communities prefered among those who are discuised as Gubernatorial candidates. I have received 300 replies and they go to show that the Democrats want to see ex-Governor Pattison renominated, while the Republicans are all opposed to Senator Delamater.

"Our organization is solidly arrayed against Senator Delamater, because it was through him that the Grangers' Tax bill was defeated in the last Legislature, though he had previously pledged himself to vote for the measure Senator Delamater promised our State Grange and the Grangers at his home in Crawford County, that he would do all he could to bring the bill out of the Finance Committee of the Senate to which it had been referred and of which he was a member and he further more promised to advocate the passage of the bill. We waited until the very latest moment before making an effort to take the bill out of the committee and placing it on the Senate's calander so as to insure its consideration before the adjournment of that body. When the resolution was offered in the Senate to take the bill out of the committee Senator Delamater made a speech against its passing and the resolution failed by one vote. Had he voted as he had agreed to do the resolution would have been carried. As it was the bill was buried in the committee and lost.

The Need of Good Roads.

College professors, civil engineers, and magazine writers are directing public attention to the subject of country highways, and the Vanderbilt University, Tennessee, has gone so far as to provide for the free instruction in road engineering of one person for each county in that State. The Baltimore Sun, which is agitating the question in Maryland, points out that the power required to draw a wagon weighing with its load one ton, on a level macadamized road of broken stone is sixty five pounds, which is increased to two hundred pounds on a common dirt road. Prof. Ely, of Johns Hopkins University, estimates that poor roads cost the farmer, on an average, $15 per horse, and Prof. Senks, of Knox College, Illinois, argues that with good permanent roads freight could often be hauled ten miles on wagons chesper than it could be taken one mile on a dirt road to a railroad station, unloaded, put on cars and carried to its destination. Of social influences of good roads, he says that "a large part of the mental inspiration of the farmers depends on their ability to attend church, lectures, concerts, and social gatherings at a distance: and really good roads, by enabling them to go so much more easily, would doubtless raise the whole intellectual tone of the farming community, besides keeping within the healthful influence of the farm many who are now forced into the towns."—Ex.

Peculiar

Many peculiar points make Hood's Sarsaparilla superior to all other medicines. Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom. Peculiar in its strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's. Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered." Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is now more sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, has no other preparation ever attained such popularity in so short a time, and retained its popularity and confidence among all classes of people so steadfastly.

JOHN G. QUICK.

The death of John G. Quick of Rupert on Saturday last was a surprise to all his friends. Only a couple of days previously he had been in Bloomsburg, apparently in good health and spirits. On Thursday he was seized with illness, and died suddenly on Saturday. He was a well known man throughout the county, being identified with the Grangers, and being recognized everywhere as a good citizen and an upright man. He had served as justice of the peace of Montour township for nearly 30 years, and had filled many other local offices. Mr. Quick was born in Rush township, Northumberland county, in 1824 and moved with his parents in 1829 to the farm where he died. He was married in 1853 to Sarah, daughter of the late John R. Moyer of this town. Mrs. Quick and one daughter, Mrs. William Mensch, survive. Mr. Quick was a son of John H. Quick and a brother of the late W. Grier Quick, and the following who are still living: Charles Quick of Marysville, Iowa, Mrs. Rosetta Dietterich, of Milton, Mrs. Maha's Barkley, Mrs. Hettie Barton, Mrs. Sade Thornton, of Bloomsburg, Miss Kate Quick of Rupert. The funeral took place at the house on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, services conducted by W. C. Leverett. The attendance was very large.

Kissed Another Man's Wife.

"You scoundrel," yelled young Jacob Green,
At his good neighbor, Brown—
"You kissed my wife upon the street—
I ought to knock you down."
"That's where your're wrong," good Brown replied,
In accents mild and meek;
"I kissed her, that I've not denied,
But kissed her on the cheek—and I did it because she looked so handsome—the very picture of beauty and health. What is the secret of it?" "Well, replied Green, "since you ask it, I will tell you; she uses Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I accept your apology. Good night." "Favorite Prescription" is the only remedy for the delicate derangements and weaknesses of females, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee of giving satisfaction in every case, or money paid for it returned.

For billiousness, sick headache, indigestion, and constipation, take Dr. Pierce's Pellets.

Centralia.

Logan and Centralia collieries made about 14 days each in April and expect to make a few days more in May.

Centralia colliery is putting a new hoisting engine in their inside slope, which will increase its output and consequently employ more hands. The size of the engine can be imagined from the fact that one of the cranks was loaded on a wagon at the depot all right, but the wagon had scarcely moved when it spread out like a pancake. The company then concluded it was cheaper to move it by rail.

Mr. Edward Reese, of Centralia, was very pleasantly surprised on Tuesday evening. He has been taking quite an interest in the school here for some time past, and in order to show their appreciation of his efforts in their behalf, the teachers of the borough and Conyngham township, thirteen in number, tendered him a surprise. Mr. Reese was to make the flag presentation speeches, at the township school houses, on Wednesday, so the teachers thought it very appropriate that he should have one first. Mr. Shannon, principal of the North Conyngham township school, presented the flag, and made a speech that would have been a credit to a county superintendent. Mr. M. W. Brennan and Mr. Lenahan also spoke, and Miss Cook made a few remarks in behalf of the lady teachers. Some singing followed, and altogether made it an occasion to be remembered with pleasure.—Mt. Carmel News.

MRS. CHAS. HATHORN, 51 Pearl St., Bangor, has been very low with Kidney Disease; she has been confined to her bed for some time. Had a constant and intense backache with all other symptoms of Kidney Disease. Her husband bought Brown's Sarsaparilla; she was cured by it, and is now in better health than for years. Her friends say Brown's Sarsaparilla saved her life.

JOHN PHILLIPS of Taylorstown, Washington Co., Pa., says: I had suffered dreadfully from Stomach and Liver trouble and was reduced to 117 pounds, when I commenced to use Brown's Sarsaparilla, and now weigh 140 pounds. I consider it the best Medicine I ever used, and had tried a great many, without relief before taking Brown's Sarsaparilla. You may refer to me whenever you please.

The railroad men of the United States are among the most capable, industrious and faithful of her citizens. To them immense interests are intrusted, and without them we should make little or no progress. In their daily toil, there is called good judgment, honesty, fidelity, quickness of thought, hand and eye, and coupled with these, they are required to do an immense amount of labor. There is little or no work connected with the building and maintaining of a railroad that does not bear heavily on the Kidneys. On the track, in laying rails and in grading; in the shops where the marvelous engines, and palatial cars are put together; in the baggage room, at the desk, on the engines, or wherever the railroad man may be, his work opens a path for Kidney trouble. Railroad men therefore, cannot fail to be interested in the statement of a man, who, for 40 years, has been a roadmaster on the big Boston & Maine Railroad, and now having charge of over 800 miles of roadbed. HOW TO USE THE ROAD SCRAPER.

Some Useful Hints on the Repairing of Roads.

In a little book on "Improvement of Highways," prepared under the auspices of the League of American Wheelmen, an anonymous writer, who is vouched for as authority, writes as follows on the subject of road making as applied to the care and improvement of the track:

"To provide a smooth highway," he says, "is now a very simple and inexpensive work, as labor saving machinery has recently been introduced which, under ordinary conditions, is very effective. The 'road scraper,' or hone, mounted in a frame on wheels and geared so that it can be set to any plane and angle, will smooth off and round up a dirt road quickly and cheaply, compared with former methods. The general practice of the road master has been to defer the annual repairs till such a time as the farmer has most leisure or inclination to work out the road tax; this would usually be late in the summer, or even in the fall when the road crust is at its hardest stage, and after being broken up and spread anew is too dry to harden again readily. Now that the 'road hone' may be used, work that took a week in the fall may easily be done in a day in the spring. Thus the road will be in the right form for summer travel at the opening of the season, instead of at its close. This would also be making the repairs at the earliest opportunity after the chief damage is done. The worst ruts and ridges are formed early in the spring when the frost is thawing out, and the ground, being loose and porous, absorbs all the rainfall till the road bed becomes spongy and miry. When the ground has dried sufficiently to be neither muddy nor crusty, the rough ridges are in their most friable condition. They can then be planed down with the road hone with much greater ease, and the material carried into the ruts and holes, will pack and harden much better than at any other time, whether the road be chiefly clay, loam, sand, gravel or small stones. This medium stage of dryness gives the best conditions for easy and effective work. If the work be neglected for only a few weeks, the crust may become so hard under the constant pressure of traffic and the baking sunshine that the hone can make no impression on it. If the work be deferred till midsummer or later, the 'crown' will probably be worn off the center of the road, and instead of shedding rain to each side it will carry it along like a water course. Heavy thunderstorms often cause great damage when a road thus becomes flat or hollow in the middle. To restore the proper form when the margins become high and hard is very laborious work, whether done with pick and shovel or with plow and scoop. The material will not pack readily in dry weather, and the newly repaired road may for weeks be in worse condition than before it was worked. Instead of extensive repairs of this character only once a year, it would be much better to give a timely scraping as soon as practicable after the chief damage is done in the spring, and also an occasional honing after heavy rains, or whenever from any cause the surface becomes rough. One machine would be sufficient for a large district, and the times, methods and terms of the work can be arranged on a satisfactory and permanent basis after a few years' experience. Under ordinary conditions a fair road can be maintained throughout the season with simply this occasional passage of the road hone over it. The cost would be very small compared with present methods. Of course these machines are only suitable where the road is built up with the ordinary soil or subsoil of the district, or with perhaps more or less gravel or small stones in certain sections. This, however, is the ordinary structure of all our country roads, and hence this treatment will be quite generally applicable."

In the same work is printed a treatise by Mr. Clemens Herschel, which treats of the kindred subject of road repairs as follows:

"After a road has been properly rolled, and the surface made compact and smooth, it should always be maintained in that condition, no matter how great is the amount of travel on it. 'A stitch in time saves nine,' here as well as elsewhere. The tendency is to produce ruts; these gather water; this soaks into the road bed and spoils the whole. The problem can be put in this way: To have a good road it is necessary that there be no dust or mud on the same, and that there be no ruts; therefore, remove the dust and mud as fast as they are formed and fill up the ruts as fast as they are made. The whole matter is here in a nutshell. It may be thought, at the first view, that this is too expensive a system. Its principal beauty lies, however, in the fact that it costs less per mile of road kept one year than the pernicious system of annual or semi-annual repairs, as can be shown and proved. The above two rules—sweep off the mud and dust as fast as they are formed, and fill up the ruts and bad places with new materials as fast as they appear—are all that is necessary to be carried out in order that there be continually a good road. Without continual repairs there can be no such thing as a constantly good road—a proposition that cannot too often be repeated. By repairing a road annually, or twice a year, it matters not which, the result is, strictly speaking, a good road at no time during the whole year. The road is wretched just after repairs; it becomes passable after awhile, and deteriorates from that day forward until it is again made wretched; and so on ad infinitum, according to the present only too commonly followed system. By the other method is offered us a road as smooth as a floor, year in and year out, and, let it not be forgotten, at less expense."

The following, from W. T. C. Wardwell, of the Rhode Island board of agriculture, states the farmers' view: "There can be but one view taken in regard to the advantage of good country roads, not only to the farmer but to the whole state, in the increased value of property. Why the farmers, paying their proportion of the taxes, deriving no benefit from any fire service, having no police protection, still submit to the miserable country roads without a vigorous protest, is beyond my comprehension."

How to Cure a Headache.

Dyspeptic or bilious headache is very common, and, it seems to me, it is the headache which is most easily traceable to its cause and most readily avoided without medicine.

Every one who has ever suffered from it knows, as well as I can tell them, the cause and remedy. It is the old story of appetite, indulgence and punishment.

If you wish to know my advice as to curing bilious headache, I say—Don't get it. Eat such food as agrees with you; be temperate in all things, and be as regular as clock-work about your habits. In the case of young people this headache can always be traced to some error in diet—as rich food in immoderate quantity, eating at unreasonable or unusual hours, drinking wine or beer, etc., etc.—and it readily gives way to an emetic and sleep. Almost any emetic will do—ipecac or sulphate of zinc. In the case of elderly persons, however, the headaches, although less acute, are apt to be more tedious and more exhausting. Rest in bed, cold applications to head, and some purgative medicine taken so as to operate in the morning, will usually effect a cure.—DR. MACHENRY, in Ladies' Home Journal.

"Hello! Hello!! Hello!!!"

"Well; what is it?"

"How is your mother, this morning?"

"Very much better; she had a real restful sleep last night; she is almost rid of her night-sweats, cough and nervousness, and is growing quite cheerful. How grateful we all are to you for that bottle of medicine."

"Don't speak of gratitude. What does the doctor say?"

"He says he never saw so wonderful a change in such a serious lung trouble. He still thinks we are giving his medicines. I don't like to tell him."

"That's right. He's an old friend, you know. I'm sure your mother will get well now; but you won't forget the name of the medicine, will you?"

"Never! Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery" are household words already, and it has come to stay. Do come and see what sunshine it has brought already, and let us thank you again for it."

"I will. Good bye."

The foregoing is a fair representation of a very common occurrence. "Golden Medical Discovery" has cured severe, lingering coughs and arrested Consumption, or Lung-scrofula, in thousands of cases after doctors have failed and other medicines have been tried and abandoned as useless. The "Discovery" is guaranteed to benefit or cure in every case, if taken in time and given a fair trial, or money will be refunded.

Killing the Horse.

A DEED THAT SIGNIFIED DEATH OR VICTORY.

At Towton where the White Rose triumphed mainly through Warwick's generalship and courage, he rode a horse named Malech; and at the crisis of the battle, when the Lancastrians were gaining the upper hand, inspired his men to renewed effort by killing his horse to show that he would rather die than retreat. Here is Monstrelet's description of the incident:

"The Earl, hearing that his uncle was slain and his men defeated, cried out, with tears: "I pray to God that He will receive the souls of all who die in this battle;' then exclaimed, 'Dear Lord God, I have none other succor but Thine in this world now, Who art my Creator and Redeemer; I ask vengeance, therefore, at Thy hands!' Then, drawing his sword, he kissed the cross at the handle, and said to his men: 'Whoever chooses to return home may, for I shall live or die this day with such as may like to remain with me.' On saying this, he dismounted and killed his horse with his sword."

This exploit was frequently performed by the mediæval heroes, and Warwick himself repeated it at Barnet, his last field, when he rode his favorite black deserter, Saladin, an animal of great size and beauty.

"He kissed the destrier on his frontal, says Lord Lytton, in his brilliant historical romance of "The Last of the Barons," "and Saladin, as if conscious of the coming blow, bent his proud head humbly and licked his Lord's steel-clad hand. So associated together had been horse and horseman that, had it been a human sacrifice, the bystanders could not have been more moved. And when, covering the charger's eyes with one hand, the Earl's dagger descended, bright and rapid, a groan went through the ranks. But the effect was unspeakable! The men knew at once that unto them, and them alone, their lord entrusted his fortune and his life, and they were moved to more than mortal daring."

Adulterating.

Mr. Alfred Speer, of Passaic, N. J., having noted the want of a strictly pure and a first-class wine, has for the past thirty years devoted his time and capital to raising the Oporto Grape from the vine brought from the Doura valley in Portugal, with the view to supplying this want; has been eminently successful, the endorsements which his Port Grape Wine has received from physicians all over this country and in Europe will testify.

The Warmest Re ion on Earth.

There are many very warm spots on the torid zone, but Bohrin, by the Gulf of Persia, seems to be, as far as temperature goes, absolutely without a rapid. For forty consecutive days in July and August last year, which was by no means an exceptional season, the thermometer was known not to fall lower than 100 degrees Fahrenheit, night or day, and often ran up as high as 128 degrees in the afternoon. Nature, as if to make the spot as intolerable to human beings as possible, has banished all water from the rocks of the locality, at least none has ever been procured by digging to depths of nearly 500 feet, and the numerous pits or dry wells in the neighborhood show how thoroughly the upper stratum has been tapped. In spite of these apparently insuperable obstacles, however, mankind has contrived to flourish and multiply in this region to an amazing extent, and the necessary fresh drinking water which the land has refused to yield is obtained from the Gulf of Persia, where, at a distance of more than a mile from the shore, innumerable copious springs burst forth.—From the Scotsman.

The Rainbow of Promise.

Tamed By Perfumes.

A LEOPARD THROWN INTO TRANSPORTS BY THE SMELL OF LAVENDER WATER.

Wild animals are completely fascinated and can be tamed by perfume. There was a Mrs. Lee in India who had a tame leopard that played in the house with her children. He was very inquisitive, as all of the cat tribe are, and loved to stand on his hind legs and with his fore paws on the window sill look out at the passers by.

When the children wanted the place themselves they would all take hold of his tail and pull him down by that. He was generally very amiable, but sometimes, his claws being very sharp, the children were scratched. So Mrs. Lee taught Sultan to keep his claws sheathed by giving him when he did so a little paper tray on which lavender water had been dropped.

This would throw him into transports of delight. He would tear the paper into bits and roll over with them on the floor. With nothing but a bottle of lavender water, I have become the best of friends with a leopard, a tigress and lioness in the menagerie.
